'Quake Levels 5 Villages

Tehran, Oct. 13.—Five villages were completely destroyed by an earthquake near Bafand, in the province of Khorasan, East Persia, the semi-official Tehran evening paper Ettelaat, reported today.

Two hundred and ten bodies have been recovered from the ruins so far, a delayed message to the paper said.

Last week the Peloponnese region of southern Greece was shaken three times by earthquakes, a number of villages being destroyed, and the port of Kalamata damaged.

The tremors were felt in Athens, where three seismographs at the observatory were put out of order by the force of the shocks, but no damage was reported in the city.—Reuter.

Russian Support For Partition

Lake Success, Oct. 13.—In a major policy statement today, Russia approved the principle of dividing Palestine into Jewish and Arab states.

The Soviet stand, announced before the United Nations Palestine Committee, put Russia and the United States in basic agreement on a major issue for the first time at this session and heightened the possibility that the partition plan may win United Nations approval.

While favouring the idea of partition, Russia objected to the boundaries recommended by the United Nations Investigating Committee and suggested specific Soviet recommendations which would be forthcoming later.

Like the United States, Russia failed to say how partition should be enforced. Russia previously favoured a joint Arab-Jewish state in Palestine if that were practical, but the Soviet delegate, S.K. Tsarapkin, said that the high tension now existing between Arab and Jewish interests made a joint state unworkable.

Russia also demanded that the British mandate over Palestine end as soon as possible. It asked also that the United Nations agree on an authority to rule Palestine while the country was being divided. The authority would be responsible to the United Nations.

The Soviet pleaded for a solution of the Palestine problem on a "broad political basis" rather than "academic" arguments over whether the Jews or the Arabs were in Palestine first.

The Jewish Agency for Palestine jubilantly hailed the Soviet announcement as a "historic and consistent development" of its policy. "We are heartened by the acceptance of the urgent necessity for the establishment of a Jewish state as well as by the prospect of agreement among major powers on Palestine," it said.

Tories' New Charter

THE recent Conservative Conference had two outstanding features. One, the launching of a campaign to raise a large sum to rebuild the Party's organisation in readiness for the next General Election; the other, the wholehearted adoption of the new "Industrial Charter." Politically, the most important part of the charter is the rejection on "the place of the Government in a free society." This defines policy on economic planning and employment, colonial development and overseas trade, controls, taxation, trade unions, the individual trader, monopoly, and nationalised industries. It is noticeable that the Conservative policies on planning and maintenance of employment differ from those of the Government rather in method than principle. Through the present methods of control are criticised as hampering industry and wasting labour, the Tories would continue controls "until abundance overtakes scarcity," and ration "until every family could buy ample supplies." They would restore free markets with the limited exchange at their disposal, and would abolish "major controls which cannot be made effective." Naturally the Conservatives would like to give tax relief and as a long-term policy they advocate reducing income tax to enable more profits to be put into re-equipment

Truman Reviews The European Situation

TOP-RANKING ADVISERS ATTEND WHITE HOUSE

Washington, Oct. 13.—President Truman today summoned an unprecedented array of American statesmen and diplomats to the White House for a full-scale exposition of the European situation.

At the meeting, which took place in his private study and lasted an hour, the President heard:

1.—First hand reports on the situation in Europe from General Walter Bedell Smith, the United States Ambassador to Moscow, Mr. Louis Douglas, the United States Ambassador to Great Britain, General Lucius D. Clay, the United States Military Governor in Germany, and his political adviser, Mr. Robert Murray.

2.—A summary of the latest developments on the economic and political situation in the same countries from the acting Secretary of State, Mr. Robert Lovett, and from the Under-Secretary of State, William Clayton, and Mr. John Snyder, the Secretary of the Treasury, both of whom recently returned from Europe.

3.—New information on the international food situation from Mr. Clinton Anderson, the Secretary of Agriculture, and 4.—An additional report from Mr. Herbert E. Gaston, acting Chairman of the Export-Import Bank and members of the Commodity Credit Corporation—two agencies which may be able to provide funds for France and Italy before Congress approves the $900,000,000 stopgap programme.

PROBLEMS EXAMINED

The Presidential Press Secretary, Mr. Charles G. Ross, said that President Truman received "a first hand review of the European situation," but there were no immediate details of any conclusions.

The session constituted the most comprehensive examination of European problems yet conducted by the President and, in some quarters, was thought to foreshadow a new and more positive action to tackle the European food and economic situation.

Informal quarters said tonight that the following subjects were discussed:

1.—The fact that all steps to date have failed to produce sufficient funds to maintain essential dollar imports into Italy and France until the Congress acts.

Hence the re-examination of the possibility of the money held by the multi-million dollar Export-Import Bank and the Commodity Credit Corporation being used.

2.—A thorough-going review of the present Russian strategy in Europe, with the presence of the Ambassador to Moscow in Washington and the information gained by two Cabinet officers just returned from Europe, is expected to provide the President with invaluable information on which to base a counter-policy to the formation of the nine-nation "Cominform."

3.—A review of the emergency food programme which officials here frankly admit is not going well and which threatens to enforce new cuts in the export programme if further measures are not introduced.

RUSSIAN STRATEGY

General Lucius D. Clay and Mr. Murphy were understood to be in a position to supplement General Bedell Smith's statement on the Russians' strategy and the three together are reported to have informed the President of the prospects of next month's Council of Foreign Ministers meeting in London, where they will all be advisers to Mr. George Marshall in further negotiations on the German treaty.

The hurriedly called White House meeting coincided with the first session between the United States Marshall plan officials and members of the Paris Economic Executive Committee on the plan.

In advance of this conference, it was learned authoritatively that Britain was strongly opposed to any reconvening of the Paris Conference to approve American amendments to the report.

Frankly they considered that the co-operation achieved at Paris both gratifying and extraordinary, but there was uncertainty that the same co-operation might be expected at a further session.

Therefore the whole plan could be endangered by open conflict between the European nations.

BRITISH MISSION

The British representative, Sir Oliver Franks, is understood to take the view that it is the task of his mission to advise the Americans how amendments could be made "most palatable" to the Europeans, who, however, fully realise that their report constituted only a suggestion which the United States is by no means bound to accept.

Congress, as ever, has the last word, and it would be unwise to attempt to gain European approval of the American alterations before American action.

Mr. George Marshall, the Secretary of State, who arrived unexpectedly at the White House from the nearby United Nations meetings, was also present at this unprecedented gathering of American's senior statesmen with the President.

GAITSKELL'S GENTLE HINT

London, Oct. 13.—Mr. Hugh Gaitskell, Britain's new Fuel Minister, in the first published speech since his appointment last week, said today: "If in this winter the domestic consumer goes crazy and there is a runaway expansion in the electricity demand, that is going to be the gravest threat that I can see to our whole national recovery."

The gas and electricity stations must have "their minimum of 13,000,000 tons of coal this year," he said. If they failed to get it and had to close down, it would mean disaster both to the household and to industry. Any attempt to ration domestic consumers would entail nation-wide individual surveys and even then would give the Government no control over actual consumption.

Mr. Gaitskell made it clear that gas and electricity rationing for Britain had been "most carefully considered by the Government." It had not been completely impracticable, it would have been instituted long ago. The alternative was saving.—Reuter.

Amazing New Telescope

Washington, Oct. 13.—Army ordnance scientists said they have a new 16-inch telescope that can follow and photograph a V-2 travelling 3,000 m.p.h. to altitudes over 100 miles above the earth.

Also, they said, United States experimenters surpassed the Germans in rocket research and are at present using V-2s as "flying laboratories" for testing new developments.

They predicted that the new telescope will be capable of photographing missiles the size of a V-2 at altitudes many times those being reached in the present stages of rocket development.

The latest shoot at the White Sands (Mexico) proving ground saw a V-2 rocket soar to over 100 miles altitude. The new telescope will be installed there soon.—United Press.

Cabinet Preparing New Programme

THREE IMPORTANT MEASURES

London, Oct. 13.—The legislative programme for the Parliamentary session opening on October 12 will be drafted tomorrow at a meeting of the Cabinet.

While the interim budget that the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Hugh Dalton, has drawn up as a check upon inflationary trends will be the chief subject for consideration, there are a number of other items that will be gone over carefully by the Ministers.

According to reports tonight, it is a foregone conclusion that the Government will decide to "soft pedal" the nationalisation progress in the approaching session.

There is an even chance that the nationalisation of the gas industry will be presented to the House of Commons, but the taking over of the iron and steel industry, scheduled for the same session, has been pushed into the background.

The Labour Party considers that it had fought its chief battle to put off nationalisation of steel at the Trades Union Congress in Southampton last month when it won support of that all-powerful Labour body for a delay on the steel programme.

With this endorsement, the Cabinet will have few qualms about postponement.

TIME-TABLE UPSET

The Labour Government's nationalisation time-table has been upset by the present crisis and the members in the Cabinet have insisted that efforts to take over now such a major and diversified industry will retard rather than promote the "recovery drive."

The Prime Minister, Mr. Attlee, is said to favour this view.

At least three major measures, besides the budget, are considered certain to be earmarked for prompt attention.

One of the earliest measures to be introduced is expected to be that which will give independence to Burma. This bill, it is understood, has been drafted during the summer recess and will be moved as soon as the House settles down to its legislative routine.

A second measure of considerable interest to those concerned with the development of natural resources within the Empire is the bill to develop the Colonies as a source of raw materials.

The Government has proposed a £100,000,000 Government corporation to finance and supervise production in the colonies of rice, tank and other similar products that are in short supply here and throughout the world.

A bill calling for the reform of the criminal law and for the abolishment of lodging as a criminal punishment is understood to be ready for introduction.

Flogging at present is usually reserved for criminals convicted of robbery with violence. A number of legislators have also advocated that hanging be abolished for an experimental period. This will be put to a free vote of the House if it arises.—Reuter.

Anti-Jewish Article Alleged To Be Seditious Libel

Morecambe, Lancashire, Oct. 13.—Mr. James Caunt, 47-year-old editor, publisher and proprietor of the newspaper, Morecambe and Heysham Visitor, was committed for trial at the next Lancashire Assizes after appearing before a magistrate's court here today on a summons of publishing seditious libel against the Jewish race in a recent article.

When hearing of the summons opened today, the prosecuting counsel stated that he believed Mr. Caunt's article went to the limits prescribed by criminal law for mere controversy and "threatens to interfere with the King's peace."

Caunt, who pleaded not guilty, said that he wrote the article after seeing anti-British propaganda in a United States newspaper. He declared that he did not think the Jewish expressions of horror at the Palestine outrages were genuine and agreed that his article was intended to be unpleasant to the Jewish community.

He declared, however, that he did not intend to tell the non-Jewish people that violence might be the only method the Jews would understand.

The prosecuting counsel read to the court the article in which the alleged libellous statements occurred. It declared: "The Jews, indeed, are a plague on Britain, and unless they are put in their place by the will of the people, then eventually they will do more harm to this fair Isle than 10 of the approaching economic crises," and added: "If British Jewry is suffering today from the righteous wrath of British citizens, then they have only themselves to blame for their inactivity."

"Violence may be the only way to bring them to a sense of their responsibility to the country in which they live."

The editorial also asked readers to ostracise the Jewish community in every possible way.

INCITEMENT DENIED

The following week, said counsel, the paper published a second article stating: "We neither retract nor apologise for anything that appeared last week."

Replying to the defence counsel, Caunt denied that by the use of the words "the will of the people" he had meant to incite the people to commit violence.

The case is being followed closely by official political quarters in London and prominent counsel are appearing on both sides.

The Jewish Board of Deputies which looks after the interests of British Jewry had observers present.—Reuter.

ROYAL FAMILY ADOPT LEPERS

London, Oct. 13.—The King and Queen and Princess Elizabeth are each to adopt a leper child for whose medical care and education they will be responsible. It was announced tonight at the Royal World Premier of the film "Uncle Silas" in London in aid of the British Empire Leprosy Relief Association.

The Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, who attended the premiere, are also adopting leper children.

For £5 a child can be admitted to a settlement for treatment and education. There are many thousands of children awaiting adoption, and the Association is launching a widespread campaign to increase its funds for this purpose.—Reuter.

Rescued After 20 Days Adrift

Honolulu, Oct. 13.—A Navy patrol boat today rescued three seamen adrift on powerless minesweepers for 20 days in the Pacific near the tiny Palmyra Atoll. The Hawaiian Sea Frontier reported that the men were in good health and did not need medical attention.

The patrol craft reached the minesweepers drifting in the sea 440 miles east and northeast of Palmyra about 2 a.m., but apparently lay alongside until daylight before taking the men aboard.—United Press.

FRENCH BACK BAO DAI

Real Meaning Of Tonkin Offensive

Saigon, Oct. 13.—Military activity in Tonkin has "the ulterior political objective of facilitating negotiations with ex-Emperor Bao Dai," a high-ranking French official disclosed here today.

"Dr. Ho Chi-Minh (head of the Viet Nam Republican Government) is being bottled up and he may soon flee for his life or be killed," the spokesman claimed.

He said that the French authorities "would certainly concede to Bao Dai the substance of unity and independence. We also reckon that sporadic revolts by isolated Viet Minh bands would continue even after the present phase of organised resistance is broken up but we are confident that the masses of the people, weary of suffering, will quickly rally round a new national government headed by Bao Dai."

SETTLEMENT IN 1948?

The spokesman said that negotiations with the ex-Emperor would be "protracted" and in his personal opinion, "a settlement may not be reached earlier than January next."

French troops, continuing their new offensive in Indo-China, have captured two large towns, Cao Bang, 123 miles north of Hanoi on the Chinese border, and Baclan, 80 miles northwest of Hanoi, according to today's French High Command communiqué.

Describing the French advance as "successful," the communiqué said that the road from Hanoi to Langson, on the Chinese border, was now completely in French hands.

The Viet Nam Nationalist forces have suffered "severe losses" during the past few days, the communiqué said.

These included 150 killed in hand fighting and an "undetermined number" killed when ten junks were sunk off the coast of Indo-China.—Reuter.

In Canada

Reporter NORMAN SMART has been living among the first group of 7,000 men and women who are flying to Toronto under the Ontario Government's air emigration scheme. The first 38 emigrants have been there three weeks now. This final report brings into closer focus

4 people

BEGINNING WITH MISS DOROTHY GILBERT, 38-year-old waitress, lately of the Red Lion, Luton. She was getting along very well, grappling with her new job as a waitress in Toronto's smartest hotel, when her first air-mail letter arrived at her 358-a-week digs.

"I could have cried. The letter reminded me of the things I know so well in and around Luton. I am amazed I didn't book my passage back right away."

But now she is recovering, chiefly, I suppose, because she has got herself very well fixed up.

She left the reception hotel two days after she arrived and found her own digs. Then, hearing that the thing to do is to ring up the most important man in the business you have selected, she rang up the manager of the Royal York, the biggest hotel in the British Empire.

She was astonished when she was put through to him and he asked her to come round. "I wonder what would happen in England if I tried to ring up the manager of the Savoy for a job," she says.

After what she calls "a strict medical," she got a job on probation at £6 a week plus tips and three meals a day. For the first few weeks she is only serving at the hotel staff tables. When the management is confident that she is efficient—and efficiency standards are very much higher than in England—she will be given a post in the restaurant, and she can expect to double her earnings right away, because the tips are good and the only meal she will buy is a breakfast of tea, toast, pure white bread and butter, and marmalade, costing a shilling. The tram fare to work and back costs eightpence a day, and the journey takes 25 minutes.

She works six days a week and "harder than in England."

"But it's almost worth emigrating for nylons at 7s. 6d. a pair coupon free."

She finds difficulty in making friends, however, and cannot get used to the Canadian habit of calling people by Christian names within a few minutes of being introduced.

The few friends she has already made have taken her around Sunny-side, a miniature Blackpool on the edge of Lake Ontario, ten minutes from the centre of the town. Here she ate popcorn at sixpence, and had a swim in the beautiful beach pool for 1s. 3d.

So altogether (except when she gets those convalescent twinges following homesickness) Dorothy is pleased with her new country.

A MARRIED COUPLE come next. Mr and Mrs Lynton Blow, of Southbourne, near Bournemouth.

Although Mr Blow denies that he has ever had homesick twinges since he arrived, he looks fondly at Toronto's children and thinks of his own two (Michael and Margaret) who are being cared for by friends at Southbourne until they can be brought out.

Blow's progress here has been sensational. Within a few days of arrival he applied for an insurance job with 114 offices. He was one of the six chosen, and after a fortnight's training, came out at the top of the six in an examination. He has been working daily 12 or 14 hours, and he quite expects to work at least as hard as that for some months until he is established.

He and his wife have rooms, including bed and breakfast, at £4 a week on the outskirts of the town. He has bought himself a 1936 Buick car for £75 which he reckons would cost £300 in England. The road tax of £2 10s had already been paid, so he paid only five shillings tax transfer fee. He has already explored all the outlying country and hopes to get himself a house soon. The house he has been looking at is in Woodland on Lakeside, 20 miles from Toronto, where there is good swimming and fishing and a little shooting. It has five rooms and every conceivable electrical device, including air conditioning. Price—£2,250.

Blow earns £10 a week at the moment, but he has already been promised a district management position within two months at about £20 plus an overriding commission.

His wife gets £7 10s. weekly at the local store as a stenographer. Out of this £17 10s. weekly they find they can save money.

Mrs Blow's lunch at the firm's cafeteria costs 1s. 3d., her husband's at a restaurant around 2s. 6d. Typical menu—chilled tomato juice, steak, salad and potatoes, blueberry pie with cream, 2s. 9d. (No! I have not found this restaurant myself yet.) Both he and his wife find clothing cheaper than in England. A pair of good rubber crepe soled shoes 55s., shirts £1, men's underwear 2s. 6d. a garment. Socks he reckons expensive at 5s. a pair up.

Mr Blow sums up: "Here I've got a chance really to build something. Well, he's off to a good start."

once again

NOW A MAN who emigrated alone, William Browne, 29-year-old turner, formerly of Parkside-avenue, Barnet, Kent.

Browne is not as confident as Etow. Maybe the reason is that his wife and two children are still in England. Browne is very much a family man, and he misses them.

He started work with the Ontario Hydro-Electric Corporation at Niagara, but they moved him back to the Ontario branch. He gets £12 10s. weekly, pays 35s. weekly for room, no board, and gets lunch at the firm's restaurant for 1s. 9d.

Browne is still staggered by Canada's food and the amount people waste in restaurants.

Give him the menu in a restaurant and he reads the dozens of items with wondering care as if it was a work of fiction.

Right now he is among the happiest men in Toronto, because after tramping the streets three hours a night for a week he secured a three-roomed flat ready for his wife and family, at £4 a week. (This is four times what he was paying in England for a four-roomed house.)

Browne is the best type of British working man and he makes new discoveries about his Canadian counterpart every day. He told me that almost all Toronto's tram drivers have their own cars, and many own cottages in the country or their own sailing boats on Lake Ontario. Browne, unlike Etow, thinks that most things are more expensive than in England, but as he admits, "you can get them."

He thinks dry cleaning a suit expensive at 7s. 6d.; a pair of men's flannel trousers of English cloth cost £7; taxis (which he only uses in an emergency anyhow) have a minimum fare of 2s. A replica of the tool cabinet for which he paid 30s. in England is £6 10s. in Toronto.

Like almost all other emigrants, Browne finds Toronto's humid heat temperatures have been well over 90 for three weeks—most exhausting.

He is rather wondering how he is going to react when the thermometer dives 30 degrees below zero and lower.

More than that, though, he is wondering whether he can build out until his wife gets out against Mr. Blow's efforts to sell him some life insurance!

"What's up with you, inspired with the glorious incentive to work or did you find one of them stronger beer pubs?"

THIS MAN BEVIN

HIS STOCKPORT SPEECH MAY CHANGE BRITISH POLITICS

by W. J. BROWN, M.P.

WHEN, a couple of years or so ago, Mr Ernest Bevin, under the age-retirement rules of the Transport and General Workers' Union, relinquished the general secretaryship of that body, there were those who held that his position in politics would rapidly decline thereafter. For all Bevin's roots, throughout his life, had been in the industrial side of the Labour Movement.

In politics, which he entered at a late stage in life, he counted primarily because of his towering position in the trade union movement. When that went, the argument ran, then his political decline would set in.

Whatever else the Trades Union Congress did not do at the Stockport Congress, it did one thing. It demonstrated that that expectation was nonsense.

With no official position in the trade union world, and attending the conference as a guest, Bevin's continued retention of power was plain to see. And the speech he made there will reverberate for a long time to come. It may, indeed, create a new line-up in British politics, cutting right across the party political divisions.

There are some men who, by virtue of the qualities inherent in them, magnify and enlarge the particular positions which they occupy. There are others who, for lack of such qualities, diminish them.

The first retain their personal selves. The second lose them in the job or title.

Bevin is of the first order. In whatever capacity he has worked one has thought of him as Bevin first and a particular officeholder second.

As the dockers' representative of long ago, as the architect of the Transport and General Workers' Union, as the effective founder and builder of the Daily Herald, as the dominant figure in the TUC, as Minister of Labour, and now as Foreign Secretary, he has all along insisted on "the importance of being Ernest" Bevin.

Learner From Life

HIS second most marked characteristic is that he is a learner from life rather than from the books. Consequently his approach to problems is the practical, empirical approach.

This leaves him much freer than the Slaves of the Generalisations. They must ask what the theory would require. Bevin is free to ask what ought to be done.

Throughout his life this practical approach is evident.

BY THE WAY

by Beachcomber

DORMEZ, lions de l'Atlas! Sleep, lions of the deserts and forests of the world. Your tormentor has left you in peace, to exchange the gun for the pen.

Prodrome: Have you been big game hunting?

Myself: No. Small game hunting. Mosquitoes.

One day, I suppose, an enterprising publisher will implore me to let him publish the tale of my almost incredible adventures during the last month. It will be given one of these tomfool titles like "Whither Korea?" or "Drums Over the Hills" or "Forty Days in Unknown Peoples" (unknown being the operative word).

Pithy conversation
THE Customs officials winced when I declared "Thren lions." "For a zoo?" they asked. "No," said I. "They're dead." "Where are they?" "In this small case," I said. "Tiny dwarf lions. To make a tobacco pouch." "Open the case," I opened it. They look like ferrets, said the official, chuckling. "Where did you get them?" "In exchange for a British cigarette at a fair in Bou-Zul," I said. "Where did you get the British cigarette?" "In exchange for an Arab cigarette at Meknes." Native porters then carried my luggage to the train.

The sea serpent

ONE day I came out of the mountains to a deserted Ligurian beach. I was blistered by sun and white with dust. Plunging into the sea, I swam happily westwards, and the translucent waters made, as I swam, that happy little sound which they make when a small yacht begins to feel life in the tiller after a dead calm, and the ripples talk under her bows. Suddenly I knew I was not alone. Turning my head, I saw a small sea serpent, head and neck out of the water. It was clipping along beside me. Thinking it might attack me, I turned and made for the shore. It followed me, and then suddenly made off in the direction of some rocks. I never saw it again.

The explanation

THERE is only one explanation of the incident, and that is that there is a small sea serpent in that part of the world. Italians to whom I mentioned this merely said: "It is not dangerous." To which I replied: "No, but I am. Let it keep out of my way in future." And let no "expert" deny the existence of sea serpents.

Prodrome: Perhaps you were over-fired.

Myself: Perhaps you are talking your presidential drill again.

When war made it plain that the whole manpower of Britain must be organised to the last degree he operated the direction of labour more ruthlessly, and more acceptably, than any Conservative Minister could have done.

As Foreign Minister, speaking for England, he has held stiffer language to Molotov than Eden would have used. He does what he thinks the facts call for.

His mental processes are a little inchoate. He does not reason so much as react. He murders the King's English as badly as Winston murders French. In his speech at Southport, one of the reporters tells me, there was one sentence with nearly two hundred words, half a dozen diversions, and no ending whatever.

Saving Word

BUT if with him speech is not, as it is with Churchill, the conscious exercise, on a very high level, of a great and varied power of utterance, the instinct is usually very sound. It was sound at Southport.

There were gathered a thousand representatives of the trade unions. They were aware that something was radically wrong. From the utterances of Ministers they had gleaned little light or hope. Inexorable circumstance compelled cuts of uncertain degree and undetermined duration. Nothing had they for our comfort, and nothing for our desire, save that the sky grew darker yet, and that the tide rose higher.

It was against this background that Bevin said a saving word. It was that the way of salvation was not to be reconciled to permanently lower standards of life, not to be content to live as pensioners of the Americans, with strings attached to the pensions. It was to achieve a vast increase in production, partly by getting rid of all the practices which inhibited it, and, further, by utilising the vast resources of the Commonwealth and Empire.

Without them we are a small, heavily over-populated island off the north-west coast of Europe, doomed either to export a great part of our population or to sink to a Balkan level of life. With them we can be as rich as America and as powerful as Russia.

He favoured a Customs Union of the Empire.

Not Paupers

I WILL not argue about the mechanics of the business. They would be comparatively easy for the Colonies; more difficult with the Dominions. But it is not the mechanics which really matter here. It is the dynamics.

Bevin's speech was the first indication that any Minister was thinking in terms of anything but passive acquiescence in hostile circumstances. The first evidence of a determination to grapple with circumstance and overcome it.

The British are not paupers. We are trustees of a vast and largely undeveloped estate of incredible potential wealth. After Bevin's speech there is a new issue in politics to add to the old. It is the issue between those who are willing to rise to opportunity, and those who, in the weakness of their spirits, would acquiesce in doom.

That issue, in the circumstances of the coming months, may produce striking changes in the political situation, and deliver us from the creeping paralysis of these days.

Women BEAUTY ARTS

By LOIS LEEDS

Posed by Ginny Simms for Lois Leeds.
Here are tips for YOU!

STAR SHINE!

Ginny Simms polishes up her Star Shine by charming hats and she sweeps her hair up and down to suit her hair!

Star Shine Trick! Kathryn Grayson glorifies a Coral wool suit with a wide-over hat. Kathryn removed the crown from a large-beamed, Navy Blue straw, filled the underbrim with Coral roses in shaded tones and added a Navy Blue veil. Gloves, shoes and bag are Navy Blue.

Lana Turner claims that if she hadn't become an actress she would have tried dress designing. And, to prove her point, she designs many of her own things. Her latest creation is a Black tailored slacks suit, with soft Black silk shirtwaist and Black wool box coat.

Betty Hutton, who rides a bicycle for the good of her figure, goes in heavily for pedal-pushers.

Her latest is made of Charvonne silk, a short, button jacket, perfectly designed with multicolored braid and modified jodhpurs.

Marilyn Currier varies her method of wearing a pair of earrings by clipping them on the belt of a plain Black dress or on the slit vest pockets of her White Broadtail jacket. Lana Turner, petite child star of "Song of the South", wears a pair of small gold clips in her hair. God Charles recently created a sensation down at Palm Springs in a golden metallic latex bathing suit. It was strapless and held in place by a wire bra. It was shirred up the front and protected against damage by water.

STYLES FOR TEENERS

If the teen-agers in Britain are not soon the smartest in the world so far as their hats are concerned, it will not be the fault of the milliners, who are now starting a campaign to educate girls in the matter. The trouble has been, of course, that during the war when these girls were only children they either wore no hats at all or unform school hats. Today many still prefer to go hatless or wear a scarf round their heads. As a result, milliners in Britain see in this lack of interest a really serious challenge to their art.

The Queen's own milliner, Aage Thaarup, has taken the matter seriously and recently showed an important collection designed entirely for young girls at prices which are within the scope of their purses. Copies will be made in Luton, famous hat-making centre, by a first-class manufacturer, in high quality "hats". For the autumn and winter the hats are all in fur felt and there are over 40 shades to choose from, six of which are "star colours". These are "Tinkle Pink", "Sweet Lavender", "Topsy Red" (a rich cherry red), "Frost Blue", "Pale Leather" and "Sleepy Sand".

The teen-agers and twenties need special designs to enhance the contours of youth, and bennets, berets and bignons, each distinguished by individual treatment, are considered Aage Thaarup, the most flattering styles for the young.

Eisenhower May Be At Royal Wedding

By RUSSELL LANDSTROM

London, Oct. 13.—First of the specially designed invitations to the 1,500 guests chosen by King George VI to attend his elder daughter's wedding have been dispatched and the rest will be sent out soon by the Lord Chamberlain's office, which is handling most of the ceremonial details.

The style of the invitations has been kept secret, and pending the King's go-ahead authorities at Buckingham Palace and St. James' Palace decline to disclose the names of those on the all-important list, prepared with the greatest care under the monarch's supervision.

It was learned unofficially, however, that members of six reigning families of Europe have been bidden to the wedding of Princess Elizabeth on November 20.

Of these, it is held certain that Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard of Holland, Crown Prince Olaf and Princess Martha of Norway, Prince Charles of Belgium and members of the Swedish and Danish royal families, will attend.

Whether King Paul of Greece, a cousin of the bridegroom-to-be, can be on hand depends on the political situation in his country in November. Another of Europe's illustrious figures who is expected to be present is the Grand Duchess of Luxembourg.

Dominions Premiers

Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa, has accepted an invitation, and will have the opportunity to renew intimate associations in London. Smuts' dynamic quality was strongly felt here in two wars, lifting the morale of a tired people and giving new drive to the Allied effort.

The Prime Ministers of Canada, Australia and New Zealand undoubtedly also will come, meeting fellow-statesmen on familiar soil. United States representation is entirely speculative. The names of two famous Americans, Gen Dwight D. Eisenhower and Mrs Eleanor Roosevelt, widow of the late President, have been mentioned behind the scenes as possible guests, but there is no authoritative confirmation.

Warm Welcome

Certainly, it is cited, these two would receive a warm personal welcome as well as an official one. If they were among the famous guests, both have been received by the Royal Family, with whom they stand in the highest esteem. Mrs Roosevelt, then America's First Lady, also entertained the King and Queen during their Canadian and American tours in 1939. Gen Eisenhower was a guest at Balmoral when he visited Britain briefly in the autumn of 1946.

Foreign royalty and foremost guests from the Dominions and the United States will, after the ceremony in Westminster Abbey, go to Buckingham Palace for a wedding reception which will be—there is no escaping the word—astute. In hard fact, the master of the house, Lord Mountbatten, will apply to the Ministry of Food for a licence under the new governmental regulations, limiting the number of persons at banquets. Naturally, there is no suggestion that the Ministry might say "no"—Associated Press.

Sung Together

John, good-looking ex-R.A.F. man, comes from Farnham, near Cardiff, and works at a telephone manufacturing in London.

"I proposed six months ago," he said, "after seeing 'Perchance to Dream.' We are both very fond of music and often sing duets together at the piano. Our romance has made us very happy."

The couple were expecting to honeymoon in Brighton, where they hoped to find a house.

MACDONALD CAREY

answers this question:

Did you find it hard going back to motion pictures after being in military service for such a long time during the war?

DURING the months I spent in the South Pacific, waiting to be shipped home after the war ended, I had plenty of time to think about coming back to work. And to be frank, the thought of those first few moments before the camera had become sort of a mental hazard.

But when I actually returned and resumed my camera chores for "Suddenly, It's Spring" together with my old pal Fred MacMurray and these two lovely girls in the picture, Paulette Goddard and Arlene Whelan, my mental anguish suddenly disappeared and I felt perfectly at home.

No, it wasn't a bit as tough as I had built it in my own mind, but it was like starting life all over again. I soon discovered that I really was the ex-serviceman's time in Hollywood. In 40 major films she's at the helm, 17 of the male leads, or nearly half, were being played by war veterans.

Readjustment Problem

Of course, for long-established stars like Clark Gable, Robert Montgomery, or Robert Cummings, or John Payne, readjustment to civilian life was a comparatively simple matter of picking up their careers where they left off. In my case I had only five films to my credit when I enlisted in October 1942. So my problem was a little different—at least I thought it would be different.

It wasn't, though. And best feature of it all is the fact that my long absence from the screen, like the absence of so many others who served in the war, had no adverse effect on Hollywood's willingness to put me back to work. If anything, war veterans appear to have better opportunities than before.

Tournament—N-S vul.

Opening—♥ 4

THE Southern Appalachian Contract

Bridge Championships was held at the George Vanderbilt Hotel in Asheville on Aug. 22, 23, and 24. This tournament is actively sponsored by the Asheville Junior Chamber of Commerce.

It always provides good competition, as it attracts not only the finest players of the south, the also many of the Life Masters of New York and Philadelphia.

During the buffet given after last year's tournament, today's hand came in for a good deal of discussion. At most of the tables North and South arrived at a six spade contract, which was defeated with a heart opening.

At one table, after East doubled six spades, South went to six no trump even though he was void in diamonds, and that contract could not be defeated. Very often a player makes the mistake of doubling a contract that he feels sure he can defeat, and by his double he drives the opponents into a better spot.

East should have known that West did not have many hearts. Not vulnerable, West had offered to support when East bid two hearts, and then four hearts. From the bidding, the missing king of hearts undoubtedly was in the South hand. Therefore, the double of six spades was very unwise, and the double of six no trump was an indication of anger on the part of East, rather than ability to beat the contract.

Experts say, don't double a slam contract unless you are certain that you can defeat any other contract the opponents may run to.
